Ethiopian PM calls for new African-Chinese strategic partnership
ADDIS ABBABA, Oct. 17 - Ethiopian Prime Minister Meles Zenawi on Monday called for the establishment of a new strategic partnership between Africa and China, saying that Africa's relations with China have evolved into market-oriented economic engagement. On China's investment and trade cooperation with Africa, Meles said China's interest in Africa was "very welcome" and that cooperation had resulted in "dividends for both parties." Africa exports mainly unprocessed primary products which are low value added, said the Ethiopian prime minister. Africa wants more Chinese firms to set up processing plants for these primary products, he said. "There is an interest to add value to these products within Africa and export these value added products to outside Africa," said Meles. As to Ethiopia's cooperation with China, he said bilateral cooperation in the fields of roads, hydropower and telecommunication is "very encouraging." Talking about the upcoming FOCAC's Beijing summit, he said the FOCAC has become a platform for dialogues and cooperation between the two sides (Source: Xinhua)

South Africa warns of failure in quota on Chinese textiles

QUEENSTOWN, Oct. 18 - South African Deputy President Phumzile Mlambo-Ngcuka warned that the government may be forced to ask Chinese to increase the quota of clothes and textiles they export to South Africa if local manufacturers fail to meet demands, according to a report on Tuesday. South African Press Association quoted the deputy president as saying that if local businesses fail to make the most of the quota agreement that government had reached with China, it would expire. The recent decision of the Department of Trade and Industry to limit imports from China angered retailers who argued that it would drive clothing prices sky high. But the government got the thumbs-up from labor unions who said the move would curb job losses in the clothing and textile sector. South Africa decided to delay imposing planned quotas on 200 items of Chinese clothing and textile imports to January 1 from September 28 to take retailer concerns into account (Source: Xinhua)

Border fence construction on China-DPRK border not related to nuclear test, FM spokesman

BEIJING, Oct. 18 - The wire fence being constructed on the border between China and the Democratic People's Republic of Korea has nothing to do with the recent nuclear test by the DPRK, said Chinese Foreign Ministry spokesman Liu Jianchao on Tuesday. "China has been building border-control facilities since the 1990s and no link should be made to the current situation on the Korean peninsular," he told a regular press conference. He clarified that China has been constructing wire fences and patrol roads on its land borders, including the China-DPRK border, since 1990 (Source: Xinhua).

Chinese Foreign Ministry Spokesman Liu Jianchao said it was particularly important for all the relevant parties to exercise restraint. Liu noted that Resolution 1718 passed by the UN Security Council has sent an "important" and "clear" message to the Democratic People's Republic of Korea (DPRK). China hopes the DPRK can respond to the appeal from the international community and take up a responsible attitude to fulfill its commitment to a nuclear-free Korean Peninsula, said Liu (Source: Xinhua).

Hu said Rice arrived in Beijing shortly after State Councilor Tang Jiaxuan visited the United States as his special envoy. "This shows that U.S. President George W. Bush and the U.S. government attach great importance to U.S.-China relations," he said. Rice echoed Hu, saying her visit is a "sign of close cooperation" between the two countries. She also said "it is important that in the current difficult and complex situation, the two countries coordinate closely and share ideas on the Korean Peninsula nuclear issue." Hu said the Chinese side has always been an advocate of the denuclearization of the Korean Peninsula. China opposes nuclear weapons proliferation and seeks a peaceful solution to the nuclear issue. China "firmly opposes" the Democratic People's Republic of Korea's (DPRK) nuclear test, and adheres to UN Security Council Resolution 1718, Hu said, stressing that China will continue to pursue a peaceful solution to the nuclear issue on the Korean Peninsula through dialogue and negotiation. CPC promotes "socialist core values" as moral base for society

BEIJING, Oct. 19 - The Communist Party of China (CPC) has highlighted the concept of "socialist core value system" to lay the "moral and ideological foundations" for social harmony. The concept of the "socialist core value system" was publicized for the first time at the recent Sixth Plenum of the 16th CPC Central Committee, at which the CPC highlighted the importance of creating a "socialist harmonious society". The Party said the value system should consist of Marxism, Socialism with Chinese characteristics, patriotism, the spirit of reform and innovation and the socialist sense of honor and disgrace. In the 1980s, the Chinese authority issued a package of moral instructions - the Five Standards, Four Virtues and Three Loves - to serve as a moral yardstick for Chinese. On March this year, another large-scale morality drive was launched in the form of President Hu Jintao's list of eight honors and disgraces, which stressed the boundary between the right and wrong (Source: Xinhua).

Wal-Mart Plans to Double China Stores With $1 Billion Takeover

SHANGHAI, Oct. 17 - Wal-Mart Stores Inc., stymied this month in its attempt to expand in Japan, plans to invest $1 billion in China by buying Trust-Mart, doubling its stores in the country's $841 billion retail market. The deal needs regulatory approval and may not be announced for weeks, said a person familiar with the proposed acquisition yesterday, who declined to be identified before an announcement. Trust-Mart spokesman Huang Shiying confirmed it's in talks with Wal-Mart and other overseas companies. No buyer or price has been decided for the grocery and appliance provider, he said. Expansion in the world's fourth-largest economy may counteract slowing U.S. sales and bolster revenue. The U.S. retailer said last month that two-thirds of its stores in China have set up trade-union branches. The company, with 33,000 employees there, is cooperating with the All-China Federation of Trade Unions. Allowing its Chinese workers to unionize follows criticism from workers' groups that Wal-Mart exploits lax employee protection in the world's fastest growing major economy to keep costs low (Source: Bloomberg)

He urged foreign-funded companies to be far-sighted and conduct long-term cooperation with China. During the inspection, Wen said China will continuously improve laws and regulations related to the business of foreign companies, create a fair environment and protect the legitimate rights of all kinds of companies (Source: Xinhua)

China's fast nuclear reactor to start tests in 2010

CHENGDU, Oct. 19 - The country's first experimental fast nuclear reactor will begin trials in 2010, said Kang Rixin, general manager of China National Nuclear Corporation. Kang made the remarks at the ongoing 21st International Atomic Energy Agency (IAEA) International Fusion Energy Conference in Chengdu, capital of Southwest China's Sichuan Province. The six-day conference, which will wrap up on Saturday, has attracted 830 scientists, 750 from overseas. China started its research into fast nuclear reactor technology in 1995 and has invested 1.4 billion yuan (US$175 million) in the construction of the experimental reactor. However, fast nuclear reactor technology is not the only area of investigation. According to Pan Chuanhong, director of the Southwestern Institute of Physics of China National Nuclear Corporation, China has been researching nuclear fusion as an alternative energy source for the last 40 years. Scientists have studied the feasibility of using deuterium or heavy hydrogen from seawater to create nuclear fusion. Nuclear fusion is how the Sun produces energy. Calling fusion a safer and more environmentally friendly alternative to fission, Werner Burkart, deputy director-general of the IAEA, said that the potential to develop fusion energy is unlimited. However, Pan admitted that the first nuclear fusion plant won't be built until the middle of the century (Source: Xinhua).

Africa accounts for 30 percent of China's oil imports: official

BEIJING, Oct. 19 - China imported 38.34 million tons of crude oil from Africa in 2005, accounting for 30 percent of its oil imports, an official with the National Reform and Development Commission (NRDC) said on Wednesday. By the end of 2005, China had invested in 27 major oil and natural gas projects in 14 African countries, including Sudan, Algeria, Angola and Nigeria, said Zhang Yuqing, deputy head of the NRDC's energy department. Speaking at a press conference on the forthcoming Sino-African cooperation forum, Zhang said China's investment in the energy sector had contributed to the economic development of African countries, while its technical cooperation and training programs had helped Africa train its own oil technicians. Chinese firms have also been actively involved in building roads, bridges, hospitals and other public facilities, he said. China's dynamic economic growth over the last two decades has led to a surge in its oil demands. Official figures show that the country imported 126.82 million tons of crude oil in 2005. Saudi Arabia was China's largest source of crude oil, with imports totaling 22.18 million tons. It was followed by Angola's 17.46 million tons. Four African countries, namely, Angola, Sudan, Congo and Equatorial Guinea, were among the top 10 oil exporters to China in 2005. The Sino-African cooperation forum will hold its summit and ministerial conference in Beijing between Nov. 3 and 5. Chinese and African leaders are expected to take part in the summit with a theme of “Friendship, peace, cooperation and development” (Source: Xinhua).
