The DuBois Clubs are named after W.E.B. DuBois, a great American Negro writer, educator and freedom fighter. The organization was founded on a nationwide scale in June, 1964. It grew out of many local groups and individuals who had been active in the movements for civil rights, peace, an end to poverty and unemployment, and for the protection and extension of democracy. The people who organized the DuBois Clubs believed that all these issues are related, and that all these movements are really one big movement.

The basis of the DuBois Club program is the consideration of socialism as an alternative to the present system. While not all DuBois Club members are socialists, they are all interested in learning about socialism and most of us agree that a socialist society in the United States is the only way that fundamental problems of poverty, discrimination and war will be solved. The DuBois Club maintains that such a change will only come about when a majority of Americans desire a socialist system.

Therefore, the DuBois Clubs participate in the present movements for peace, civil rights and other democratic goals, and attempt to contribute to the dialogue on these subjects. In this way we hope to contribute toward progress in America under the present system and to the eventual shift in public opinion which will make a socialist society possible in this country.

The DuBois Clubs are growing; we have chapters in most of the major cities in the country, on campuses and in urban communities.
